Reflections

By J. HUGH SHERREY, JR. THE WORLD WE RULE We are one of millions, yet each of us rule a world.

While we may perform the most menial of tasks, it is important. It is the way we accomplish our task, our mental attitude toward it, the energy we expend in doing it, and the way we complete it, determines the failure or success of our domain.

The president of a great corporation first learned to rule himself. That mastery of himself led to greater responsibilities; leadership, position and eminence and his wealth. The young man standing before a minister with his suit-to-be bride is a potential tyrant or wise ruler. A boy asking for his first job is in reality asking to rule a world; if he proves his worth, rules with wisdom and diligence he will be happy and wealthy. Start now, today, to rule your world as you would have someone else rule it.

P.S.—To extend the hand of sincerity, fairness to you under any and all circumstances is our biggest obligation—to you.
